We hosted Airbus CFO Thomas Toepfer for a management roadshow in Frankfurt. The tone was constructively positive, post Q1 and ahead of a delivery ram in the rest of the year. We expect the next catalyst will be the business update on 21 July in London. We confirm our Buy rating and our price target of €226.

A back-ended delivery profile, with Pratt situation unchanged

The delivery schedule for the year is heavily "back-end loaded." In China, aircraft certification had an administrative delay and the nearly 20 missing aircraft in Q1 are now scheduled for delivery throughout Q2. For Pratt & Whitney A320 engines, delivery commitments for 2026/2027 are driven by Aircraft on Ground (AOG) issues linked to the specific metal-powder recall campaign, placing them outside Airbus's corridor. No additional volume agreement was reached in February, and Pratt's engine delivery commitment is unchanged. There's a two-year contract breach and an ongoing dispute, but an out-of-court agreement is preferred over a prolonged lawsuit, with downside risk now considered limited. Constructive discussions are underway with CFM Engines, but no significant positive volume impact is expected before 2027 (on top of signed orders), with only a few extra engine deliveries possible in 2026. Rate stability at 75 aircraft per month could enhance profitability, aided by pricing discipline and lower working capital requirements.

Guidance reaffirmed, with attractive shareholder returns in mind

The CFO appeared to remain confident that guidance can be achieved, albeit conditional on Pratt & Whitney's performance. As a reminder, 2026 EBIT guidance anticipates a 2-cent drag from FX hedges, ex-Spirit AeroSystems costs (low-triple-digit-million impact), and R&D expenditures, to be offset by increased volume as a tailwind. Regarding tariff reversals, limited tariffs remain, and while reclaiming 2025 tariffs is a possibility, it's premature to declare victory. The Middle East impact has not resulted in cancellations or deferrals, and no "gliders" were observed in Q1. The supply chain is operating with normal production and logistics, with the exception of business class seats, but it remains mostly Buyer Furnished Equipment. Supply chain issues are localized to Pratt and are not systemic. The "in-housing" of Spirit AeroSystems is viewed positively, though it does not indicate a general move towards in-sourcing when other suppliers face issues, as wing production and fuselage in the case of the ex-Spirit work packages is considered a key competence. Airbus maintains an interest in attractive shareholder returns, with share buybacks remaining a tool in the toolbox. The medium-term outlook is IMPORTANT RESEARCH DISCLOSURES AND ANALYST CERTIFICATIONS LOCATED IN APPENDIX 1. Deutsche Bank does and seeks to do business with companies covered in its research reports. built on operational leverage, improved pricing and increased volumes for the A350, and a favourable A320 mix. Hedging cannot be done too far into the future due to prohibitive costs.

Space transaction progressing as planned

Airbus Defence and Space is currently undergoing a turnaround with a strong focus on execution. The proposed Bromo transaction requires the carve-out of Airbus space activities, which is necessary but complex. Discussions with unions and European bodies are ongoing. There is a preference for the deal to go through in 2027. European space technology is considered at the leading edge in geostationary systems, with more exposure to constellations needed. The space division could significantly benefit from massive European-level investments in Earth observation and Low Earth Orbit (LEO).

Defence business could leverage current environment

Airbus Defence and Space experienced a high order intake in Q1. Regarding the Future Combat Air System (FCAS), the fighter jet represents only one pillar (others include Combat Cloud, UAS, etc), and no resolution has been reached via mediation. The company is satisfied with its defence business, focusing exclusively on profitable ventures. For the Eurofighter, order intake supports an increase in deliveries from ca. 13 to ca. 20 per year in the medium term. The A400M transport aircraft is expected to find additional demand in Europe. Airbus intends to leverage the current geopolitical context to further grow its defence business.

Buy, PT at €226

Our price target remains based on the average of three methods: a 2028E EV/EBIT SOTP valuation yielding €286, where Airbus Commercial is valued at 20x EV/EBIT 2028 (compared with Boeing above 23x) and Defense, Space, and Helicopters at a 15.3x 3-year forward multiple (peer based); a DCF valuation resulting in €190 per share; and a 4% FCF yield approach based on 2028E, which yields €202 per share.

Equity rating dispersion and banking relationships

Equity Rating and Dispersion Key

The Equity Rating Dispersion Chart depicts the following:

The proportion of recommendations that are rated "buy", "sell" and "hold" over the previous 12 months. This is shown for securities issued in the stated region e.g. "Europe Universe". See rating definitions below. This is represented by the "Companies Covered" bars in the chart. The percentage value displayed above the bar is the proportion as a percentage. E.g. 50% above the “buy” / “Companies Covered” bar means that 50% of DB’s equity research covered companies over the past 12 months have a “buy” rating.

Next to each of the three respective bars showing the proportion of "buy", "sell" and "hold" recommendations we provide two additional bars to show:

- The proportion of "buy", "sell" or "hold recommendations where Deutsche Bank and or/Affiliates provided MIFID Investment or Ancillary Services in the past 12 months. This is represented in the "MIFID Investment and Ancillary Services" bar. The percentage value displayed above the bar shows the proportion of Companies Covered with the given rating where DB has also provided MIFID Investment and Ancillary Services in the past 12 months. E.g. 50% above the “Cos. w/ MIFID Investment and Ancillary Services” bar means 50% of the Companies Covered with the rating stated have also received MIFID Investment and Ancillary Services from DB.

- The proportion of "buy" (or "sell" or "hold) recommendations where Deutsche Bank and or/Affiliates has provided Investment Banking services in the past 12 months for which it has received compensation. The percentage value displayed above the bar shows the proportion of Companies Covered with the stated rating where DB has also provided Investment Banking services in the past 12 months. E.g. 50% above the “Cos. w/ Investment Banking relationship” bar means 50% of the Companies Covered with the rating stated also have an Investment Banking Relationship with DB.

Buy: Based on a current 12- month view of TSR, we recommend that investors buy the stock.

Sell: Based on a current 12-month view of TSR, we recommend that investors sell the stock.

Hold: We take a neutral view on the stock 12-months out and, based on this time horizon, do not recommend either a Buy or Sell.

TSR = Total Shareholder Return. Percentage change in share price from current price to projected target price plus projected dividend yield

Macroeconomic fluctuations often account for most of the risks associated with exposures to instruments that promise to pay fixed or variable interest rates. For an investor who is long fixed-rate instruments (thus receiving these cash flows), increases in interest rates naturally lift the discount factors applied to the expected cash flows and thus cause a loss. The longer the maturity of a certain cash flow and the higher the move in the discount factor, the higher will be the loss. Upside surprises in inflation, fiscal funding needs, and FX depreciation rates are among the most common adverse macroeconomic shocks to receivers. But counterparty exposure, issuer creditworthiness, client segmentation, regulation (including changes in assets holding limits for different types of investors), changes in tax policies, currency convertibility (which may constrain currency conversion, repatriation of profits and/or liquidation of positions), and settlement issues related to local clearing houses are also important risk factors. The sensitivity of fixed-income instruments to macroeconomic shocks may be mitigated by indexing the contracted cash flows to inflation, to FX depreciation, or to specified interest rates - these are common in emerging markets. The index fixings may - by construction - lag or mis-measure the actual move in the underlying variables they are intended to track. The choice of the proper fixing (or metric) is particularly important in swaps markets, where floating coupon rates (i.e., coupons indexed to a typically short-dated interest rate reference index) are exchanged for fixed coupons. Funding in a currency that differs from the currency in which coupons are denominated carries FX risk. Options on swaps (swaptions) the risks typical to options in addition to the risks related to rates movements.

Derivative transactions involve numerous risks including market, counterparty default and illiquidity risk. The appropriateness of these products for use by investors depends on the investors' own circumstances, including their tax position, their regulatory environment and the nature of their other assets and liabilities; as such, investors should take expert legal and financial advice before entering into any transaction similar to or inspired by the contents of this publication. The risk of loss in futures trading and options, foreign or domestic, can be substantial. As a result of the high degree of leverage obtainable in futures and options trading, losses may be incurred that are greater than the amount of funds initially deposited - up to theoretically unlimited losses. Trading in options involves risk and is not suitable for all investors. Prior to buying or selling an option, investors must review the 'Characteristics and Risks of Standardized Options", at https://www.theocc.com/company-information/documents-and-archives/options-disclosure-document. If you are unable to access the website, please contact your Deutsche Bank representative for a copy of this important document.

Participants in foreign exchange transactions may incur risks arising from several factors, including the following: (i) exchange rates can be volatile and are subject to large fluctuations; (ii) the value of currencies may be affected by numerous market factors, including world and national economic, political and regulatory events, events in equity and debt markets and changes in interest rates; and (iii) currencies may be subject to devaluation or government-imposed exchange controls, which could affect the value of the currency. Investors in securities such as ADRs, whose values are affected by the currency of an underlying security, effectively assume currency risk.

Unless governing law provides otherwise, all transactions should be executed through the Deutsche Bank entity in the investor's home jurisdiction. Aside from within this report, important conflict disclosures can also be found at https://research.db.com/Research/ on each company's research page or under the 'Disclosures' tab. Investors are strongly encouraged to review this information before investing.

Backtested, hypothetical or simulated performance results have inherent limitations. Unlike an actual performance record based on trading actual client portfolios, simulated results are achieved by means of the retroactive application of a backtested model itself designed with the benefit of hindsight. Taking into account historical events the backtesting of performance also differs from actual account performance because an actual investment strategy may be adjusted any time, for any reason, including a response to material, economic or market factors. The backtested performance includes hypothetical results that do not reflect the reinvestment of dividends and other earnings or the deduction of advisory fees, brokerage or other commissions, and any other expenses that a client would have paid or actually paid. No representation is made that any trading strategy or account will or is likely to achieve profits or losses similar to those shown. Alternative modeling techniques or assumptions might produce significantly different results and prove to be more appropriate. Past hypothetical backtest results are neither an indicator nor guarantee of future returns. Actual results will vary, perhaps materially, from the analysis.

The method for computing individual E,S,G and composite ESG scores set forth herein is a novel method developed by the Research department within Deutsche Bank AG, computed using a systematic approach without human intervention. Different data providers, market sectors and geographies approach ESG analysis and incorporate the findings in a variety of ways. As such, the ESG scores referred to herein may differ from equivalent ratings developed and implemented by other ESG data providers in the market and may also differ from equivalent ratings developed and implemented by other divisions within the Deutsche Bank Group. Such ESG scores also differ from other ratings and rankings that have historically been applied in research reports published by Deutsche Bank AG. Further, such ESG scores do not represent a formal or official view of Deutsche Bank AG. It should be noted that the decision to incorporate ESG factors into any investment strategy may inhibit the ability to participate in certain investment opportunities that otherwise would be consistent with your investment objective and other principal investment strategies. The returns on a portfolio consisting primarily of sustainable investments may be lower or higher than portfolios where ESG factors, exclusions, or other sustainability issues are not considered, and the investment opportunities available to such portfolios may differ. Companies may not necessarily meet high performance standards on all aspects of ESG or sustainable investing issues; there is also no guarantee that any company will meet expectations in connection with corporate responsibility, sustainability, and/or impact performance.
